Developing Data Products

Since the beginning of the Data Science Specialization, we've noticed the unbelievable passion students have about our courses and the generosity they show toward each other on the course forums. A couple students have created quality content around the subjects we discuss, and many of these materials are so good we feel that they should be shared with all of our students.

We're excited to announce that we've created a site using GitHub Pages: http://datasciencespecialization. github.io/ to serve as a directory for content that the community has created. If you've created materials relating to any of the courses in the Data Science Specialization, please send us a pull request so we can add a link to your content on our site. You can find out more about contributing here: https://github.com/ DataScienceSpecialization/DataScienceSpecialization.github.io#contributing

We can't wait to see what you've created and where the community can take this site!

Back to Developing Data Products Home